Rhetoric and Professional Communication

The Department of English offers the B.A. in English as the cornerstone of studies in the humanities. The study of literature and the English language provides students with a source of personal enrichment as well as with verbal, analytical, and cultural skills that are readily adaptable to a variety of careers. The department offers a curriculum designed to meet a variety of interests: literature, creative writing, technical and professional communication, rhetoric, and film. Students can prepare for graduate study as well as careers in teaching, business, government, or law. The Department of English has a strong commitment to providing academic and career planning and advising designed to assist the English major in entering the profession of his or her choice.

The department also offers minors in English, creative writing, medieval and early modern English studies, and rhetoric and professional communication. Further information about career opportunities and options or minors is available from the Department of English.

Students who wish to use English as a double major may eliminate one elective from the departmental requirements with the consent of the department.
